Annual Survey of Indestries, works out to be 10.8% between the period 1990-91 and 1998-99.

As per the Economic Survey 2000-01, the average annual increase in real wages (i.e. wages at current prices deflated by CPI for agricultural labour) for unskilled agricultural labour works out to 2.72% during the period 1992-93 through 1999-2000.

(c) and (d) The average annual increase in the minimum wages (at current prices) for unskilled agricultural labour in the central sphere works out to 65.34% and that for non-agricultural workers 17.66% between the period 1988 and 1998. The increase in the minimum wages is thus higher than the percentage increase in actual wages as well as consumer price indices both for industrial and agricultural workers.
